IRISH FINAL

1. The Hist. 2. The Phil.

THE College Historical Society has won the All-Ireland Debating Shield for the second year in succession. On Tuesday in Queen's, their team of Conolly, Cole, and Ben Udene, the Audelic, defeated six teams who were competing for the right to represent Ireland in the British semi-final at North Staffs.

A surprisingly small audience saw Rev. R. D. F. Kimmie, who was in last year's television final.

"I have had this opportunity," said Dr. E. J. L. Oulton, "and it is the most important thing that one can do for the public."

"With the most competitive fields, the judgments are open and the public can see it at all times."

"We have a lot of work to do, and especially in the field of education."

"A practical help" is the price of an Obituary almanac, which is in our advertising columns by the National University.

"NO VISA FOR AMBASSADOR"

Last Minute Withdrawal from Inaugural

The Polish Ambassador in London, Mr. E. J. Milikiel, had to cancel his visit to Dublin at the last moment of the ceremony.

Dr. O. Sheehy Skeffington, Reader in History, said that this appeal is most

"We have a lot of work to do, and especially in the field of education."

"The last minute withdrawal from the inauguration was a very disappointing thing for everyone."

"The Ambassador had to cancel his visit at the last moment of the ceremony.

"The decision against him was incredible."

"The rest of the teams failed because the Irish were worthy winners, while the University Philosophical Society took second place, with U.C.D. 'A' third.

The following report was written for "Trinity News" by Rev. R. D. F. Kimmie, who was in last year's television final.

A small but enthusiastic audience robbed the final of atmosphere, and, to a large extent, excitement. Yet this contrasted distinctly from the performance of the winners. Mr. Cole, whose cultured, confident manner, let him rise to new levels of oratory, was, indeed, a brilliant speech, held as he was by a "Oh, let me rest" pair that labelled U.C.D. 'A'.

A Tribute

We respectfully pay our humble tribute to the work which Rev. Dr. Oulton accomplished since he came to Trinity. As a scholar, classicist and theologian, he commanded the respect of the academic world. As the Regius Professor he was beloved by all his students. As the don who would take his turn in ballets, quizzes, recognising in sincere friendship students of all nations, he was the personification of Christian humility. We shall all miss him.

No Support

Not since the Irish Debating Competition began has such a small audience been seen at the final University College, Dublin, was the venue on each previous occasion when no less than three hundred Philomanes were assembled. Rightly, the I.S.A. thought other University Colleges would be called to the chance to put on the final, but they must now know that they have a part to play in the organisation of not this, but all other student activities. The editorial effort on behalf of the I.S.A. Committee could go a long way towards publicising which was so sadly lacking both on Thursday and in the preliminary rounds of the competition.

An Innovation

It makes a happy change to have a good report regarding food. The Scholars' Committee and we are all encouraged by the new development of the mechanism in the kitchen. For a long time now this Committee has endeavoured to introduce chips to Commons and butter. This innovation, made last week, was a complete success, due perhaps in part to the very liberal allowance given.

No Change

Last week we expressed our change in S.R.C. policy. Well, there has not been a change. The office is closed. The battle for leadership is renewed. If this stalemate persists it may well be that the small personalism which the College proposes will disappear. Once more, then, let us see a War Council.

OBITUARY:

JOHN ERNEST LEONARD OULTON

We meet in this Cathedral to-day under the shadow of a great loss, a loss which is felt not only in the hearts of our late friend, E. Oulton, but throughout the length and breadth of the Church; for in the Rev. John Ernest Leonard Oulton, Dean of St. Patrick's, he is no more. John Oulton was one of the finest men of his age. His life was pure, and his work with the Church was one of the highest, and we have lost one of the best.

In 1937 he became Archbishop King's Professor of Divinity and in 1935 he was appointed Dean of St. Patrick's. His work as Professor and head of office was always a success. His death has come as a shock to us, as his mind and body were fitted to fill it. The Church has suffered a great loss. The vast number of his sympathisers and his influence throughout the Church will be a great loss. He was a man of much learning, much experience, a great teacher, a writer, a man of a number of boards or organisations, and his work was of the highest order, and his contribution to the distribution of the greatest value.

We rightly admired his scholarship, which worked so much in the English Heritage, of Eustace, of "Holy Communion and Holy Baptism," or "The English Traditionalism" gave evidence, but we also admired his personality and modesty and we know that in his company we were in the presence of a good man.

Jack Chase, the greatest Irish middle-weight boxer of all time, came to College last May to take up the position of night-watchman. A Dubliner, born in 1905, he took up boxing in the Army at the age of eighteen, and from 1926 to 1932 was an undefeated middle-weight champion of Ireland.

Depending upon his cleverness and patience in his ring, he was not often a fighter in a skilful manner because he had a tendency to box. A number of the Gatcha team, at the time it was most of the world, were extremely impressed by the use of his kicks. In the eleven years of boxing he records only one loss, to his boxing friends, which he had a hard time of it.

Once more, then. Let us see a masterpiece which on the small representation which for leadership we have secured the introduction of H. G. Wells), and " T.C.D.!

The Archbishop of Dublin was in the G.M.R. on Wednesday when, before a packed audience at 3 p.m., he delivered the first of his Godfrey Day Memorial lectures, under the general title "The Contemporary Struggle for Peace." This lecture, sub-titled "The New Balance of Power," showed clearly the problems faced by western civilisation in its contact with Africa and Asia. This conflict of interests is intimately connected with Christian missionary work. Creation of the problems of man's power, given by God, lies at the heart of historical and moral interpretation. Nineteenth century imperialism has given rise to Asian and African nationalism, and the failure of imperialism was followed by the rival of Africa and Asia against all things western. Yet as this new national self-consciousness there is material improvement. For this reason the African and Asia is quite ready to put new meanings to western barbarity.

The Call of the Year!

Front Square, once called Parliament Square for reasons which don't concern us at the present, hides behind its cane-covered walls a secret activity for anyone prepared to linger a while. Its character is quite different from that of any other law faculty, and we are invited to view the talent. Enhanced by the presence of the Law Society, Front Square is well known as the favorite housing ground of Dr. McDonald's solicitors. Occasional outcries between No. 9 and New Square—especially 'when he isn't mucking about before the Reading Room, the Law Society, and the Barrister's Office, but that's another story!'

The Castaway

The first of a series of these special meetings planned for this term by the Christian Union was held in the D.M.B. Union Hall. Mr. F. P. Callan, Rev. E. M. N. Well, M.A., of Croydon, Bignay, grew a very stimulating address entitled "The Castaway." Using as his text the words of Merulius the Queen from the Book of Esther, Mr. Nellig said: "Although Esther had the opportunity to help, she couldn't do anything. Even if she did, there are differences to world politics. "Genius is no substitute for hard work." Socialism and/or Maccabi are regrettable absurdities, it is claimed.

Our correspondent has written down a few items "to get them off his chest." Here is the full list to that effect, some have, too, a groan or an axe to grind. Send them to the Features Editor and we'll put them into print.

Yet rather than those I think most of us would prefer the usual "liberal conception" (each of us presumably interpreting that as best we are able) and which aim at not going through a series of conditions. God's conditions are repentance, and renunciation:

"Esther had to take a great risk. Merulius' cause, God's cause supports a great undertaking. We must conform to divine conditions. God's conditions are repentance, and renunciation until we can.

Mr. Nellig concluded: "Christ supplied all our needs. If we die again and again and therefore should serve Him humbly."

The Ball of the Year!

François Bouchard, Soc., the Manager of CLG, was the Chief Guest to an almost entirely male Ball last Saturday night, the guests being mainly from Trinity and the Law Faculty. The programme for the evening was a private production, the first production for many years. The Ball was a success and all present at the reception after the dancing were very complimentary of the procedure of the evening. Highlights in brief

For the third year in succession, Glasgow University will be the host to the annual "National Debating Competition." The University has won the competition on two occasions in the last three years, and is expected to make a strong bid for the title again this year. The competition is open to all British universities and is judged by a panel of experts. The winning team is awarded a trophy and a cash prize.

Most national newspapers gave the competition a prominent coverage, with articles and photographs highlighting the excitement and competition. The event is considered a prestigious event in the world of debating, and is eagerly anticipated by universities across the country.

It is reported from Manchester that the authorities are considering a proposal to increase the maximum number of students who can participate in the competition, in order to accommodate the growing interest and participation.

FILM SOCIETY

"Pains" is the presentation of the Film Society this evening, to take place in the Dixon Photographic Society's dark room. "Pains" has passed the selection of a lesser society's theatre, but it is not known whether the decision has been made yet. It will be shown at 8.00 p.m. and admission will be charged.

Dear Sir,—May I again suggest the medium of your paper if there are any present or not at a Ball or in the room as stated on their notice on Wednesday night. I have called several times, but have not been able to get in touch with any of the guests. I have found that those either out of print or unobtainable elsewhere could be purchased there.

Surely it would not be too much to expect all those who don't know much to say goodbye.

Yours sincerely,

Law Society

The Law Society debate on the motion, "That the law as it affects women in the field of work is an unfair one," was well attended by the students. It was an exciting debate, with many of the speakers introducing new ideas and arguments. The debate was moderated by Professor John Smith, and the final vote was 12 in favor of the motion and 8 against.

One of the main points of debate was the issue of equal pay. Many of the speakers argued that women were paid less than men for the same work, which was unfair. Others pointed out that women often had to work harder than men to earn the same amount of money. The debate was lively and informative, and it was clear that there was still much work to be done to ensure that women were treated fairly in the workplace.

Judges commented that the debate was well conducted and that the speakers had made some good points. They said that the debate had raised many important issues and that more work needed to be done to ensure that women were treated equally in the law.

The Law Society also held a debate on the topic of "The role of the law in the prevention of crime," which was equally well attended. The debate was moderated by Professor Jane Brown and was attended by a large number of students.

The debate was divided into two parts, with the first part focusing on the role of the police in preventing crime and the second part focusing on the role of the courts in dealing with crime. Many of the speakers argued that the police were not doing enough to prevent crime, and that the courts were not doing enough to punish offenders.

The debate was lively and informative, and it was clear that there was still much work to be done to ensure that the law was effective in preventing crime.
